Task 1

Make a list of the kinds of texts that you expect your future learners to need to write in English in the course of their lives. Obviously, it is impossible to predict who you are going to teach and what their needs are going to be, but try and make your best guess. Think of all possible aspects of their lives: work, study and private life.

Look at the list you have come up with and mark which text types you think you should actually include in your lessons.
